WHAT CATARRH DOES.

IT AFFECTS THE BLOOD, weakening and undermining the system, making one an easy prey to dangerous diseases. NEARLY ALL STOMACH TROUBLES are traceable to and caused by Catarrh. THROAT AND LUNG DISEASES are many times the result of Catarrh. BRONCHITIS is simply the extension of Catarrh inflammation to the Bronchial Tubes. LUNG TROUBLES are superinduced by Catarrh. EVERY CASE OF CONSUMPTION was, at one time, a case of Catarrh. ASTHMA is of Catarrhal origin, and can only be permanently cured by removing the cause. HEADACHES AND EAR TROUBLES result from Catarrhal inflammation in the throat. NEURALGIA is a prominent Catarrhal symptom. MANY NERVOUS TROUBLES result from Catarrh and inflammation of Catarrh. HEART TROUBLES (supposed to be) are in a great many instances due to Catarrhal conditions of the system.

CATARRHAL AND OTHER CHRONIC DISEASES, NO MATTER OF HOW LONG STANDING OR WHAT DEGREE OF SEVERITY, CAN BE CURED BY DOCTORS MCCOY AND COWDEN.

Why? Because they are masters. Because they bring into use the knowledge and skill acquired by years of study and experience. Because, by a careful and thorough examination of each case, they learn just what the trouble is, and therefore just what is required to cure the patient. Because they prescribe, prepare and furnish the remedial medicine used, and do not try to make every case fit a certain remedy. Because they realize and know that the disease requires special treatment, and that both local treatment and constitutional remedies are required. That local application alone will not cure; that internal medication alone will not cure; that a combination intelligently prescribed to meet the features, peculiarities, complications, etc., of each case is the only successful method.

All American Citizens.

(From the Buffalo Times.)

Some distrust is expressed, in various quarters, of the patriotic co-operation of our foreign-born citizens in case of a war with Spain. Examples in history cannot be cited to make reasonable any reflection of this character. The possibility of Germany's sympathy with Spain in the anticipated war with the United States, causes some to express a fear that very few of the 2,000,000 German-born citizens, and of the twice as many children of these Germans living in this country, would take active part in furnishing troops for the Government. The civil war gave to the union armies many thousands of Germans who fought as valiantly for their adopted country as any of their conspicuous service in previous years for the "fatherland." The same devotion would again prevail if their adopted country should need their intelligent fighting for the honor of the United States.

At the outbreak of the rebellion the War Department immediately exhibited some of the uncertainty now spoken of. In fact, as early as July 19, 1861, general order No. 46 was issued by the Secretary of War, the paragraph of which was as follows: "In future no volunteer will be mustered into the service who is unable to speak the English language." It may be that confusion of tongues may have been Stanton's fear in this matter, but if he had been at the front at that time he would have found that no difficulty was present in the German-American mother-tongue vocabulary. They could also fight

To insure your perfect satisfaction you had better leave your order now for your Spring suit. It will then be ready before Easter.

CATCHERS OF THE LEAGUE

Doyle's Coming Enthusiasm the Local "Fans"—Bernstein and Elliott Meet Thursday Night—Hob Fitzsimmons Expected to Spring a Surprise Shortly.

The League catching staff never had so many experiments in line as are numbered on the rolls, nor, it may be added, so few experiments who promise to turn out winners. Almost every club is carrying a couple of youthful backstops, and not one club in the lot seems to expect that the lads will turn out strong enough to displace the veteran wearers of the mask and pad. Good young catchers are woefully scarce. They are always in demand, but never seem to be good enough to pay for the trouble of securing them.

Washington has a couple of new comers in Dinnin and Snyder, but will not use them as they are not "Red-Headed" Jim McGuire and "Duke" Farrell.

Pittsburgh has young Eddie Boyle, Murphy and Schirer—a fair assortment. St. Louis will depend upon Sugden and the veteran, Jack Clements.

New York has Warner, Wilson, Grady and Zeigler; the last-named player would be good if given a chance, but he is hardly likely to get it with the others in line ahead of him. Philadelphia has Fox and Fisher for new backstops, and the latter is said to be pretty good. Boyle and McGuire, however, will be the catchers of the future, and then there is Douglas ready for any emergency.

Cleveland will use last year's staff—Zimmer, Criger and O'Connor—and is very strong behind the bat. Louisville has a small army of aspiring backstops, but they will all peter out in short order, and leave Wilson and Dexter to do the season's work.

Chicago has a new "named" Chance, but he has already shown symptoms of weakness with the stick, and it is more than likely that Kitzinger and Donahue will continue to pick him off the bat.

Brands and Bemis constitute Boston's experiments in the catching department, but Berens will receive the majority of games, with Yeager, a yearling, to relieve him.

Clarke, Robinson and Bowerman will handle the Oysterburgs at Baltimore. Brooklyn has called back a veteran, Jack Ryan, and will split up the work evenly between Ryan, Grim and Alek Smith—all mediocre men.

Wood is the name of a promising young backstop of the Cincinnati Reds, and so far he appears to be the only really good youngster of the big league. Vaughn and Pict will, of course, do most of the hard labor.

Now that the Doyle matter has been definitely settled, and it is known that "Scrappy" Jack will play here the coming season, the local fans are in high fever, and predict all kinds of success for the Senators in the championship series.

There is no denying the fact that Doyle will strengthen the team wonderfully, both in the field and at the bat, and prove valuable in many a close game. He will be the captain of the team, and in that position will infuse a life into the players hitherto unknown among the Senators. Manager Hilditch has been pleased with the result of the conference between Wagner and Doyle, as he can now go ahead and make up the team that will do battle in the League race of '98.

"Joe" Bernstein, of New York, will meet "Joe" Elliott, of Baltimore, before the Europa Athletic Club of Baltimore in an 8-round "go" at 121 pounds, next Thursday night. The preliminary bouts will be between Eddie Lenny and Joe Laughlin, and between John P. McGeever and "Young Smyrna," six rounds at 135 pounds; and "Kid" Lacey and Jack Ashton, six rounds at 105 pounds.

"Bob" Fitzsimmons has something "up his sleeve" just now, which he intends to spring upon the public upon the night of the 1st of April in a fall contest with his friends at present. "Fitz" is a very tactful individual at any time, but it is the general idea that the champion thinks the sportsman who has been another good man; that they won't accept him as a retired pugilist. A New York Sun reporter asked "Fitz" the other day if he had retired from the ring. The Cornishman looked at the questioner for a minute. Then, with a smile and a suggestive wink, replied: "No."

When asked what he thought of Kid McCoy, Fitzsimmons said impressively: "Not much."

"Will you meet him?" asked the reporter.

"I may, if he can get enough backing," said Fitz, "but for further information you must see my manager."

Julian said that he might have something to say in a week. It was learned on good authority that Fitz intended to accept McCoy's challenge at no very distant day.

Manager Hanlon, of the Oysterburgs, has the following to say of his new first baseman: "From what I have seen of Morris the sportsman, I am confident he is the equal of any first baseman in the league, with possibly one exception—Doyle. He has some few things yet to learn, but who hadn't when they were at the young in the business as he? With a little instruction he will be all that could be desired in the fielding line, and his batting is now what we want. I am pleased that he is in a fall contest with us on these grounds. There has been no rain here for some weeks, and the surface is as hard and baked as our grounds here in July. Just get up there, knotty and uneven. Just get up there and try to show how many balls on this ground would fly up and take you in the stomach." Danny is being instructed at present in fielding to the pitcher who runs to cover the bag. Manager Hanlon impersonates the pitcher at times, and cautious McGinn is "take plenty of time" and "toss the ball slow" that both it and the pitcher will reach the bag at the same moment. It must be said that McGinn is an apt pupil and is improving daily in the fielding tricks of the Oysterburgs. Manager Hanlon also said that some of the drives neatly taken in by McGinn, Doyle would not have attempted, owing to the uncertainty of the ground.

Tom Brown and "Winnie" Mercer were arrested spectators at the Georgetown-John Hopkins game Saturday.

Hugh Duffy does not approve of the extra games called for by the schedule of this year. He does not think October a very favorable month for ball playing.

Dahlen will captain the Chicagoans this season. It is said the Colts—big pardon, the Maroons—elected him under pressure.

The Cincinnati infield will be: Beckley, first base; McPhee, second base; Irwin, third base; Corcoran, shortstop.

Shanley and Jeffries Matched.

New York, March 29.—In response to a telegram asking Tom Shanley if he would meet Peter Maher in May, Tom O'Rourke received a reply that Shanley had been matched to fight Jeffries before the Olympic Club, San Francisco, the latter part of next month, and if successful, he would consider the proposition favorably.

The Only Thing Needed

To Remove Bronchitis, Catarrh, Consumption and Pneumonia

From the List of Dangerous Diseases is the Education of the People.

Ever since the discovery that catarrh, bronchitis, pneumonia and consumption were purely local diseases, caused by the presence of bacilli in the air passages, the medical profession throughout the world have bent all their energies to finding some method or remedy by which these bacilli could be reached and destroyed. How they have succeeded is told by a glance at the records published by the different boards of health in all the large cities in this country, which show not only a great increase in the number of deaths yearly from the disease, but a steady growth in the number of persons afflicted. This failure to find a cure for diseases of the respiratory organs must not be construed to mean a lack of ability on the part of the medical profession, for they have discovered many remedies which would kill these germs. Yet, strange to say, not one of them could be conveyed to the parts affected by dry air. It can be readily seen, then, that the discovery of "Hyo-mel," a germicide of sufficient power to kill at once the bacilli of these diseases, and at the same time volatile enough to impregnate every particle of air breathed by the patient, yet leaving it free from moisture, was one of vital importance to the medical profession, and through the whole country began to test the efficacy of this new remedy and now, after two years' trial in hundreds of cases, not only the medical profession, but the people claim that "Hyo-mel," the Australian Dry Air Cure, is the only treatment by which all the diseased parts of the respiratory organs can be reached and destroyed.

Further, it is claimed that in families who are predisposed to catarrh and consumption, if the fathers and mothers will but instruct their children in the use of "Hyo-mel," a distant generation will be freed from these dread diseases. It would seem, then, that nothing remains to be done in order to remove these diseases, but to instruct the people, and but to teach the people the value of "Hyo-mel."

FAST RIDING.

Four Centurions Cover 112 Miles in Eight Hours.

Four members of the Century Club of this city rode one of the earliest centuries Sunday last, under conditions which would have made the ordinary cyclist shudder. The riders started in a heavy, drizzling rain, with a strong wind blowing, and continued riding in the rain until the finish. The Centurions were started and finished on this remarkable ride were Tom Reed, Howard Fisk, Dennis P. O'Connor and John J. Pister. The latter now holds the twenty-four-hour record for the District. The start was made at 10 o'clock Sunday morning at Georgetown, at 6:30 o'clock Sunday morning, and the route taken was up the Conduit Road to Anglers' Clubhouse and on single wheels to the Oysterburgs, thence to the Oysterburg Clubhouse and on to the Oysterburg Clubhouse and on to the Oysterburg Clubhouse.

The club run had been called to Surrogate's Court when the point was reached, and when the point was reached, the riders who had already covered 50 miles when they joined the riders in the first bunch. A stoppage of the riders was made at Surrogate's Court, and the riders were allowed to rest for a few minutes. The riders were then allowed to rest for a few minutes. The riders were then allowed to rest for a few minutes.

DECIDED IN O'BRIEN'S FAVOR.

Awarded the Fifteen-Round Fight With Dick Moore.

New Haven, Conn., March 29.—Dick O'Brien and Dick Moore met here last night in a fifteen-round bout. O'Brien got the decision. The Bostonian had his man going early in the contest, but the going saved him. Moore was again nearly out, when the bout was stopped at the end of the fifteenth round.

O'Brien and Moore fought three times, O'Brien winning twice, and the other contest resulting in a draw.

Coal in War Times.

(From the Boston Journal.) Is coal contraband of war? In the event of hostilities between the United States and Spain, would the vessels of the contrabandists be permitted to coal freely at the British West Indian ports?

These are interesting and might become important questions, but it appears that no definite answer can be given to them. The treaty of Washington prescribes three general rules, to which England would be bound. One of these makes it necessary for England to prevent the arming, equipping and departure from any British port of any vessel suspected of the intention of cruising or carrying on war against either belligerent. Another requires England "not to permit or suffer either belligerent to make use of its ports, harbors, waters or basins of naval operations against the other, or for the purpose of the renewal or augmentation of military supplies or arms, or the recruitment of men."

If coal is reckoned contraband, it is no violation of neutrality under the interpretation of international obligations accepted by England and the United States, to sell to a belligerent, for it is permissible to sell arms and ammunition. But in this case, the transaction would be subject to the risk involved in getting the coal to its destination; and it would be liable to seizure, if conveyed in neutral vessels just as arms and ammunition would be.

There is good American authority for the view that coal is not contraband, and that belligerents cannot interfere with neutral trade in it. In our case against England in the matter of the Alabama and the other cruisers, our grievance at this point was not that the Confederate vessels were coal supplied, but that they were armed and equipped.

As to the English policy, as is pointed out by the London correspondent of the New York Tribune, the discussion of this question, there is a conflict of interests. England has coal to sell, and her practice has been on the commercial side of the question. But she has a chain of fortified coal stations around the globe, which gives her an advantage over other powers in the event of war, and her imperial interests would therefore incline her to restrict the coal supply to belligerents in neutral ports. The question is likely some time to present itself in a form which will require a choice between these interests.

Worrying Judge Day.

(From the Chicago Chronicle.) "How do you do, Mr. Secretary of State?"

"I'm not the Secretary of State."

"But you are the Assistant Secretary of State and—"

"I'm not that, either—would not have the place under any circumstances. I am simply ex-Judge W. A. Day, of Washington, here to attend the Interstate Commerce Commission meeting."

Mr. Day regretted that night that he had not registered at the Palmer House as Mr. Dick or Mr. Anybody. All day long and far into the slumber hours of the night he had been thinking of the people who wanted to convince him that he was Sherman's understudy. He had not turned from the register and been assigned to his room before a stranger of sycamore build wanted to grasp him by the neck and tell him that he was Sherman's understudy. "You and Mr. McKinley are acting with excellent judgment," said the unknown. "There is nothing like conservatism."

"You evidently think I am the Washingtonian," that I am the Assistant Secretary of State. You are badly mistaken," Mr. Day then confirmed himself to him, believing that he could escape the attention of Assistant Secretary of State Day's friends. He confessed toward midnight that he had made a mistake in the name of the man to whom he had no more cards were to be sent to his room.
